

THE GRAND MERIDIAN · HOTEL & SPA

Minimal

BLACK & WHITE · SWISS GRID · ARCHITECTURAL

Option 3 of three. Every QR code in this document is live and scannable — test them with your phone. Placeholder links point to a demo domain and will be swapped for your own URLs. Every label is tap-and-scan: printed QR plus an NFC chip behind the artwork.

Formats: A4 sticker sheet, table tent, 85×55mm card and door plate.

Every label in this pack is dual-action: a guest can tap their phone or scan the QR — both open the same page. The QR is printed; the tap comes from an NFC sticker applied behind the artwork.

1 • Chip

NTAG213 (144 bytes) is enough for every link here. Use NTAG215 if you later want longer payloads. Order them as 25mm round white PET stickers, adhesive backed. On metal or foil surfaces you must order on-metal / ferrite-backed tags, or the tap will not register.

2 • Encode

Write each tag as an NDEF URI record pointing to the URL below. Free apps: NFC Tools (iOS/Android) for small runs; ask your supplier for bulk pre-encoding on larger orders. Always tick lock / read-only after writing so guests cannot overwrite a tag.

3 • Placement

The dashed circle printed under each QR marks the tap target — stick the NFC tag on the reverse of the card, centred on that mark. Keep tags at least 40mm apart; closer than that and a phone may read the wrong one.

4 • Test

Tap-test one of each label type before the full run. iPhone XR and later read NFC from the lock screen with no app. Older iPhones and some Androids need the QR — which is exactly why both are on every label.

Replace the placeholder domain with your live URLs before encoding. The Wi-Fi label is the one exception — encode it as a Wi-Fi record, not a link, so the phone joins the network on tap.
